The Van Scoyoc Companies

Welcome

Welcome to Washington and the Van Scoyoc Companies. I hope you'll find this guide useful during your visit to Capitol Hill.

Our Country's forefathers enshrined in the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution the people's right "peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances." They considered this right of equal importance with freedom of religion and freedom of the press.

Thousands of Americans visit their elected representatives in the House and the Senate each year, providing Members of Congress and the Administration with vital insights into the Country's needs and fears and wishes for the future.

Unfortunately, many Americans today don't appreciate this right – and this privilege – they have to influence government by making their views known, either directly or through agents and associations. The Founding Fathers knew that a great nation grew out of a vigorous competition of ideas and interests, and they designed our Government to accommodate conflicts, not quash them.

We at the Van Scoyoc Companies have always believed that our primary role was to help our clients find honorable and effective ways to make their arguments known to those in power.

Please don't hesitate to ask anyone in our firms for something you may need during your visit to Washington. We don't pretend to have the answer to every question, but I guarantee you that when we don't, we know how to find it.

Regards,

Hints for Visiting Congressional Offices

Have a Plan

Preparation for a Congressional visit should begin long before you walk through the office door. Decisions must be made on what you present, who plays what part in the presentation, and your goals. It doesn't hurt to have a fallback plan, too.

Remember to turn off cell phones and pagers before the meeting.

Bring as few metal objects as possible to Capitol Hill with you and remove all metal objects from your pockets before passing through the metal detectors at the entrances to the House and Senate office buildings.

Bring ID with you. You will need it to access the Capitol Building.

Know Your Members of Congress

Do some research on them. A good place to start is their Web sites.

Have they supported your project or cause in the past?

If yes, expressions of gratitude are appreciated

Focus on Specific Issues

Congress is a large institution and power is spread widely. Your Members will have their greatest impact in certain areas, usually matching the jurisdictions of their committee and subcommittee assignments.

Our professionals can help you decide where to focus and where you may have the most impact.

At the Meeting

Never mention political contributions at a meeting with a Member of Congress or staff person. It is also illegal to deliver a political contribution inside a House or Senate office building.

Arrive on time

Keep your meeting brief and to the point. Other groups are probably stacked up behind you, and the people you are seeing will appreciate your efficiency.

You may not be able to meet directly with the Member, but don't be disappointed. Members are extremely busy and have many competing demands on them. The staffers assigned to the issues you will be discussing know them well. The Member will rely on staff to convey your thoughts. Remember to thank the Member for any past help he or she may have given you.

When you explain your position to the Member or staff, remember that personal stories and anecdotes are much more powerful than impersonal statistics. Tell them in simple terms why you care about this issue.

If you don't know something, offer to find out and report back to the Member later. This will give you reason to express your views again.

Don't step over the line that separates forthright discussion from argument. You can disagree without being disagreeable.

It never hurts to reiterate your positions at the end of the meeting

To reinforce your meeting, leave behind any suggested wording for letters or legislation, along with any fact sheets or summaries. Make these as concise and powerful as possible. You can't imagine the amount of paper a typical Congressional office has to process.

After your Meeting

After your meeting, you or someone in your group should immediately write up notes about what was discussed, the reception your ideas received, and any other observations you may have made. Later, a personal thank-you note never hurts.

Places to Vísít

You or your family members may have time to visit some of the many museums, monuments, and historical places in Washington. All of the Smithsonian's 19 museums and the National Zoo are free, although most private sites charge an entrance fee. Here is a list of some of the most popular places in the central area of the city. Most of the museums are open from around 10 a.m. to at least 5 p.m., with later closing hours during the summer tourist season.

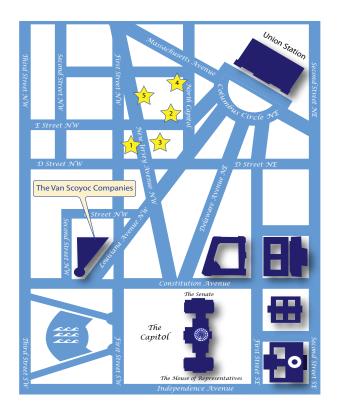

- 1. American Indian Museum, one of the newest Smithsonian museums. Check out the Native American food in the restaurant.
- 2. Arlington Cemetery. Once Confederate Gen. Robert E. Lee's plantation, now the Nation's most honored resting place. Accessible via Metrorail. (Not on map)
- 3. Capitol Visitors Center, a magnificent new underground public entry and interpretive center.
- 4. Corcoran Gallery of Art, an extensive collection of contemporary and 19th century art.
- 5. Fords Theatre and Lincoln Museum. Go back to the night President Lincoln was assassinated. Also a working theater.
- 6. Franklin Delano Roosevelt Memorial.
- 7. International Spy Museum. Large collection of exhibits and memorabilia about spying. Popular especially with younger people.
- 8. Jefferson Memorial.
- 9. Korean War Veterans Memorial.
- 10. Library of Congress. World's largest library. Check out the magnificent Jefferson Building.
- 11. Lincoln Memorial.
- 12. Museum of American Art. Shares the old Patent Office building with the Portrait Gallery, modern and folk art.
- 13. Museum of American History.
- 14. National Air and Space Museum.
- 15. National Building Museum. Amazing structure originally built as office to process Civil War veterans' pensions.
- 16. National Gallery of Art. Washington's world-class art museum, filled with both modern art and classics.
- 17. National Zoo.
- 18. Natural History Museum.
- 19. Newseum and Freedom Park. Honoring the First Amendment to the Constitution and a free press.
- 20. The Pentagon. Daily tours should be arranged long before a visit at http://pentagon.afis.osd.mil/tours.html or through Member of Congress. Accessible via Metrorail. (Not on map.)
- 21. The Phillips Collection. The county's first collection of modern and Impressionist art.
- 22. Portrait Gallery. A magnificent but underappreciated collection of old and new portraits.
- 23. Renwick Gallery. Wonderful old museum in the "salon" style.
- 24. Supreme Court. When the Court is in session, visitors can also listen to oral arguments, but may be very long lines. Downstairs exhibits.
- 25. United States Botanic Garden. Collection of living plants in several climates. A blessing on a cold day.
- 26. United States Holocaust Memorial Museum.
- 27. Vietnam Veterans Memorial.
- 28. Washington Monument.
- 29. The White House. Public tours most days, but must be reserved through your Senator or Representative's office no more than six months and no fewer than 30 days before a visit.
- 30. World War II Memorial.

The Van Scoyoc Companíes

The Van Scoyoc Companies provide a total menu of Federal Government affairs and consulting services. Started in 1990 with just a handful of clients, the Van Scoyoc Companies now include the largest independent lobbying firm in Washington, D.C., plus a dynamic non-lobbying consultancy specializing in business and research development.

The Van Scoyoc Offices and the Capitol

And in 2010, Mr. Van Scoyoc created VSConsulting Inc., a consultancy that is growing in many directions, such as international business development, government contract consulting, and other non-lobbing activities. This firm also includes The Implementation Group, a pre-existing non-lobbying division that focuses on research and academic consulting.

In today's political atmosphere, any company offering Washington representation should be above reproach. Van Scoyoc Associates, Capitol Decisions Inc., and VSConsulting will always represent clients in a dignified and ethical manner. The companies strictly abide by the provisions of the Honest Leadership and Open Government Act of 2007 and other regulations, including prohibitions on gifts, meals, and travel for elected officials and staff.

H. Stewart "Stu" Van Scoyoc, the companies' founder and continuing President, first came to Washington on a temporary assignment in the 1970s as an attorney for the Dupont Company. As so many others, he found a home in the Nation's Capital, and he decided to make government affairs his life's work.

Van Scoyoc Associates, the primary lobbying entity in the group, was founded in 1990 "with three employees, eight clients, a 5-pound cell phone," as Mr. Van Scoyoc likes to say. It is emblematic of the firm that all three of his original employees remain with the company today.

Van Scoyoc Associates' original specialties were appropriations and taxation, but the firm quickly developed practices in more than 20 different areas, ranging from agriculture to water resources.

Such institutional capacity is necessary today, when Federal Government affairs are more complicated than ever. A successful government relations campaign often requires effort across a wide front and entails much more than shepherding a request through Congress.

Van Scoyoc principals are as skilled in dealing with authorizations as with appropriations, with the Executive Branch as with the Congress, with all the Government's many agencies and initiatives, as well as with the many private companies and non-profits centered in Washington.

In 2000, Mr. Van Scoyoc created the boutique lobbying firm, Capitol Decisions Inc., to provide government relations and public affairs counseling in health care, grassroots advocacy, energy, and community development.
